

Children at Sea

Seagoing parents faced the endless challenge of keeping their children entertained, safe, and out of the crew's way. Young Cyrus Lee, son of Captain Ole Lee, poses on this after-house top in 1919, chewing thoughtfully on his dad's pipe during THAYER's last trans-Pacific lumber voyage.

Cyrus Lee ran a ship chandlery in San Francisco, and even served as captain of this park's restored scow schooner ALMA in the 1960s and '70s.

Imagine being on the ocean, and baby Cyrus playing on this very spot.
